

STEP 4 - Evidence

At this point you now know the legal precedent of your Supreme Court case and have established a research question. The backbone of any research-based argument you need to find evidence that supports your statement. To establish a strong thesis statement, you'll need to explain they why. Remember searching "the impact of my supreme court case" will probably lead you down an empty tunnel. Think about, what are you really searching for?

What words are you using to find information on your research-based question?

Key Search Words:

_____ - _____
_____ - _____

What quotes have you found that either support, go against or provide further background information on your research-based question?

Website: _____

Article Title: _____

Quote:

" _____

_____ "

Website: _____

Article Title: _____

Quote:

" _____

_____ "

Website: _____

Article Title: _____

Quote:

“

_____”

Website: _____

Article Title: _____

Quote:

“

_____”

Website: _____

Article Title: _____

Quote:

“

_____”

Now based off your research provide a new thesis-statement. This should relate to the supportive evidence that you have found.

